The original design for St. Paul's Church, indicated in Richard Upjohn's perspective rendering of the facade, was a brick basilica, painted yellow, with a six-storied bell tower. The tower was only partially completed but the structure has nevertheless been called one of Upjohn's best by Henry-Russell Hitchcock.

Structurally, the church is an eclectic juxtaposition of twelfthcentury Italian elements on the exterior and Romanesque elements on the interior. The facade is divided into flat sections, broken by pilasters. The portico is supported by corbel arches. The basilican design of the nave and aisles is articulated by round arches and barrel vaulting.

The two bas-reliefs on the facade, executed by the Italian sculptor Capellano, depict Moses Holding the Tablets of the Law and Christ Breaking the Bread. They were originally part of the facade of the 1814 church, which burned. With their pedimental frame, they supply another neo-classical element.

The church is rich in extant artifacts, five of which (including the aforementioned relief panels) were rescued from the fire. The others are the stained glass window of the risen Christ over the entrance; the marble baptismal font; and the Bishop's chair, given to St. Paul's in 1813 by George Grundy.

The white marble altar and the Caen stone reredos set with mosaics have a central motif of the cross and peacock, an early resurrection symbol. The Greek cross in the tiling of the chancel floor is decorated with fleur-de-lis, an early symbol of the Trinity. These are among the predominant artistic features of the church's interior.

The altar window was installed in 1902 and designed and executed by Maitland Armstrong of New York. The decoration around the side windows, forming a border just above the wainscotting, is infused with the symbology of Christ and the Resurrection.

Modification of the 1854 structure began in 1892 with the installation of three memorials on the parish's 200th Anniversary. Two stained glass windows, "St. Augustine and his Mother" and "St. Luke, the Good Physician," were designed by the Tiffany Glass Company and erected on this occasion. The former is a

STATEMENT OF SIGNIFICANCE

St. Paul's Church in Baltimore has both architectural and historical importance. Designed by Richard Upjohn, one of the chief imitators of the Gothic Revival in America, it is one of Baltimore's most important landmarks. Its historical associations stem largely from the numerous important figures who were members of the parish, including Samuel Chase, John Eager Howard and Thomas Johnson.

In 1729, when Baltimore was laid out, the Vestry of St. Paul's Parish took up Lot 19, the highest point in the new town, and erected a small brick church. With this action they provided Baltimore with its first public place of worship and established the Mother Church of all Episcopal congregations in the city. The present structure still occupies part of that original land. It is the only property in the city which has remained continuously under the same ownership since the original survey of the town and division of lots.

The congregation of St. Paul's was formed in 1692 at Patapsco Neck by the Reverand John Yeo. Authority for establishing the congregation came from the 1692 Act of the Maryland Assembly which divided Baltimore County into three parishes. Patapsco was the first organized of these three.

Moving into Baltimore Town in 1731, the congregation constructed its first church on this site, a view of which is given in John Moale's 1752 drawing of Baltimore which is at the Maryland Historical Society. A second church was erected between 1779 and 1784, located slightly south of the original building.

Both of these structures were surrounded by a graveyard which was later moved to its present location at Fremont and Lombard Streets. Among the historic personages buried there are Colonel John Eager Howard, Justice Samuel Chase and General George Armistead.

A fourth and larger St. Paul's was begun in 1814 and consecrated in 1817. Designed by Robert Cary Long, Sr., in the neoclassical style, this building was destroyed by fire in 1854.

memorial to Bishop Wittingham and was contributed by the children of the congregation. A mural monument of Caen stone set in Siena marble was designed in Italian Renaissance style by the Baltimore architects Wyatt and Nolting, and installed in memory of Reverand Thomas B. Chase, the father of Samuel Chase, Signer of the Declaration of Independence.

Another addition to the church was the installation in 1902 of four circular medallions depicting the four evangelists as symbolic figures above the pillars of the nave. The 1946 restoration by extensive sand-blasting removed all the yellow paint from the brick exterior. The addition of a brick-paved garden containing a columbarium, and the construction of an assembly room, six classrooms and a kitchen, comprise recent chapters in the long and varied history of St. Paul's.

The present edifice was erected in 1854 upon the foundation of the Church built in 1817. This earlier building was destroyed by fire on April 28, 1854. As far as we have been able to ascertain there has never been a location survey made. The dimensions issued are taken from the Real Property Plat made by the City of Baltimore, Department of Public Works in November 1966.

It was replaced by the present basilica-style church, designed by Richard Upjohn, a leading New York architect.

Through the years, members of St. Paul's Church have played important roles in civic and historic events. Among the most prominent are: Samuel Chase, Signer of the Declaration of Independence and a Justice of the U.S. Supreme Court; Richard Gist, William Hammond and George Buchanan who were among the commissioners appointed to lay out Baltimore Town; Robert Alexander, member of the Congress of 1776; Charles Carroll, the Barrister, who was the framer of the State Constitution; Colonel John Eager

The church is rich in extant artifacts, five of which (including the aforementioned relief panels) were rescured from the fire. These of the contract are the stained glass window over the entrance, depicting the risen Christ, the marble baptismal font, and the Bishop's chair, given to St. Paul's in 1813 by George Grundy.

The white marble altar and the Caen stone reredos, set with mosaics, whose central motif is the cross and peacock, an early resurrection symbol, and the Greek cross in the tiling of the chancel floor, decorated with the fleur-de-list (an early symbol of the Trinity), are among the predominant artistic features of the church's interior.

STATEMENT OF SIGNIFICANCE (Include Personages, Dates, Events, Etc.)

In 1729, when Baltimore was laid out, the Vestry of St. Paul's Parish took up Lot 19, the highest point in the new town and erected a small brick church, thus providing the first public place of worship in Baltimore and establishing the Mother Church of all Episcopal congregations in the city. The present structure still occupies part of that original land. It is the only property which has remained continuously under the same ownership since the original survey of the town and division of lots.

The congregation of St. Paul's had been formed in 1692 at Patapsco Neck by the Rev. John Yeo. Authority for establishing the congregation came from the 1692 Act of the Maryland Assembly which divided Baltimore County into three parishes of which Patapsco was the first organized.

Moving into Baltimore Town in 1731, the congregation constructed its first church on this site, a view of which is given in John Moale's 1752 drawing of Baltimore (at the Maryland Historical Society). A second church was erected between 1779 and 1784 and located slightly south of the original building.

Both of these structures were surmpunded by a graveyard which was later removed to its present location at Fremont and Lombard Streets.

Among the historic personages buried there are Col. John Eager Howard, Justice Samuel Chase, Gen. George Armistead and Col. Tench Tilghman.

Description:

The facade consists of a gable roofed central portion with an arcaded porch under a shed roof. A square tower with a hipped roof slightly higher than the porch roof stands at the southwest corner of the building. A larger square tower, originally designed to be 150 feet high, is located at the northwest corner of the church. The exterior above the porch is divided by projecting piers into three parts, with the central portion dominated by a traceried rose window in a brownstone frame. The side bays have bas-relief stone panels. Brownstone blind arcades ornament the edges of the three bays. A badly deteriorated blind arcade of the porch is outlined in marble and is supported on unfluted Tuscan columns. Brownstone roundels with crosses are set in the spandrels. The southwest tower has an arched lancet stained glass window within a recessed panel with a brownstone sill. A smaller arched lancet is located just above street level. The northwest tower has a more elaborate design of panels with blind arches in two bays and a modern clock just above the first story lancets. A marble base of ashlar stone at the foot of the tower has a top course of brownstone. The Significance: roof is stainless steel with standing seams.

St. Paul's Church is the symbol of the first Episcopal congregation in Baltimore, established in 1692. This is the fourth church on the site, the first built in 1729 and the present erected in 1854-56. The property has the oldest continuous ownership since the original survey of Baltimore. The church is the only work existing in Baltimore by Richard Upjohn, one of the leading architects of the Gothic Revival style in the mid-19th century.

OLD ST. PAUL'S CHURCH

Location: Southeast corner of Charles and Saratoga Streets

Legal description: Southeast corner of Charles and Saratoga

Streets and according to a Block survey

the area owned by the Church is one hundred eleven feet (111') more or less by one hundred forty seven feet six inches (147'6") more or less.*

*The present edifice was erected in 1854 upon the foundation of the Church built in 1817 which was destroyed by fire on April 28, 1854. So far as we have been able to ascertain there has never been a location survey made. The dimensions issued are taken from the Real Property Plat made by the City of Baltimore, Department of Public Works in November 1966.

Question #7

The altar window was installed in 1902 and designed and executed by Maitland Armstrong of New York. The decoration around the side windows, and forming a border just above the wainscotting is infused with the symbology of Christ and the Resurrection.

Modification of the 1854 structure begain in 1892 with the installation of three memorials on the occasion of the parish's 200th Anniversary. Two stained glass windows, "St. Augustine and his Mother" and "St. Luke, the Good Physician," were designed by the Tiffany Glass Company and erected on this occasion, the former a memorial to Question #7 (Continuation)

Bishop Wittingham and contributed by the children of the congregation. A mural monument of Caen stone set in Siena marble, designed in Italian Renaissance style, by the Baltimore architects Wyatt and Nolting, was installed in memory of Rev. Thomas B. Chase, the father of Samuel Chase, Signer of the Declaration of Independence.

Another addition to the church was the installation in 1902 of four circular medallions above the pillars of the nave, depicting the four evangelists as symbolic figures. The restoration in 1946 by extensive sand-blasting which removed all the yellow paint from the brick exterior, the addition of a brick-paved garden containing a columbarium, and the construction of an assembly room, six classrooms and a kitchen, comprise recent chapters in the long and varied history of St. Paul's.

Question #8

A fourth and larger St. Paul's was begun in 1814 and consecrated in 1817. Designed by Robert Cary Long, Sr. in the neo-classical style, this building was destroyed by fire in 1854. It was replaced by the present basilica-style church, designed by Richard Upjohn, a leading New York architect.

Members of St. Paul's have played roles of civic and historic importance through the years. Among the most prominent are:

Samuel Chase, Signer of the Declaration of Independence and a Justice of the U. S. Supreme Court; Richard Gist, William Hammond and George Buchanan who were among the commissioners appointed to lay out

Revolution and Post-War Boom

BALTIMORE came through the Revolution unscathed. The town boasted two patriots of national distinction in Charles Carroll of Carrollton, statesman, and Col. John Eager Howard, military leader. It built ships for the infant navy, and its gallant sons under Maj. Mordecai Gist saved Washington's army at Long Island.

In the post-war years trade boomed and the town grew. The census of 1800 gave it a population of 31,514, an increase of more than 100 per cent over the census of 1790. It was with no little pride that the prosperous burghers set their gold watches by the "Town Clock" in the graceful tower of the First German Reformed Church (right). Yet on the outskirts Baltimore still bore the aspects of a village.

This rustic scene is Charles and Saratoga Streets, looking east, around 1800. The church is St. Paul's
